

Abousfian Abdelrazik

01/08/12

What would the Canadian government do if he had blue eyes and was Caucasian? Brown eyes and Caucasian? The Canadian government, vicariously through the leg work of CSIS and the RCMP, cleared Abousfian Abdelrazik of any criminal activity\affiliations (according to his lawyer quoted on CBC Radio One April 2, 2009). This should be the end of the story right?

When Abousfian Abdelrazik was in Sudanese custody, he was tortured by Sudanese authorities. He showed the results of this torture, a collection of scars and wounds, to a Canadian federal government official. As well, CSIS was aware of the torture. Recently, a CSIS agent testified under oath about the torture of Abousfian Abdelrazik and its results on Abousfian Abdelrazik (according to his lawyer quoted on CBC Radio One April 2, 2009). The Canadian government official did not report on this torture, act on a Canadian in distress best interests nor did he admit to even viewing any lasting scars\wounds. He appeared to be in fine shape according to the Canadian white washer.

Abousfian Abdelrazik's children have been separated from their father for no reason for 6 years. A passport could be issued by the embassy in 10 minutes. Abousfian Abdelrazik could awake from his cot in the lobby of the Canadian embassy, stumble over to the reception desk and pick up his new passport. Abousfian Abdelrazik could have his first cup of coffee on an aircraft heading home to Montreal, Canada. Presently, Abousfian Abdelrazik is sleeping in the lobby of the Canadian embassy in Khartoum. Would you let a dangerous, radical Muslim terrorist who at any minute could become a highly skilled killer sleep in the lobby of your embassy? This situation is ridiculous!

Abousfian Abdelrazik had a return ticket to Canada on an airline (according to his lawyer quoted on CBC Radio One April 2, 2009) purchased with the help of sympathizers from across Canada. The ticket expired April 3-4, 2009? Abousfian Abdelrazik cannot leave Sudan without a passport. If he leaves the embassy, he will be detained by Sudanese authorities and tortured. Ironically, not long ago Sudan offered a private jet (at their expense) to transport Abousfian Abdelrazik back to Montreal, Canada. The generous offer made by Sudanese government was rejected by the Canadian government.

Note:

Do you really want to live in a world created by the likes of a Cheney, a Clinton or a Bush (+ Cabal)? A world filled with the darkness of greed and the cheer leading squad led by this sneaky, right-wing politician. Do not be fooled into believing that Canada's new role in Afghanistan is to deliver our form of justice to a small group of Shia women. I do not agree with these laws. I do believe that the government of Afghanistan has a right to make its own laws. Besides we are being arrogant and ethnocentric. It's about Caspian oil/gas contracts and movement of product, minerals, uranium and clearing a path for pipeline right of ways. All the while surrounding Iran with puppet regimes and patsies. The Canadian government has dumped hundreds of millions into the Afghanistan pipeline deal through agencies like CEDA. The government will not disclose the exact amount. The publicly disclosed amount is quoted around $122 million a year. $1billion would fill many cavernous potholes.

Update 07/01/09:

Abousfian Abdelrazik back in Canada after six years in exile in Sudan.

Update 06/19/09:

Canada to repatriate 'suspect' from Sudan.

Update 04/24/09:

The passport was not issued. Abousfian Abdelrazik was told he would be issued a passport if he could get a ticket by Canadian authorities. They lied. Abousfian Abdelrazik still languishes on his cot in the lobby of the Canadian embassy in Khartoum, Sudan.

Update 04/24/09:

The controversial law that was under discussion in Afghanistan was passed and is now law. Afghans arrest two over murder of women rights activist Sitara Achakzai.
